The Senatorial Contest

We regret the division among our party friends in the Legislature, by which two days have been spent in a fruitless effort to elect a United States Senator. We are gratified at the assurance that in no event can John Pool be elected. There is no man in North Carolina, white or black, however infamous may be his private character, however debased may be his moral standing, who would not be infinitely preferred by the good and true citizens of the State to that recreant son.
